Explanatory Note

Rape is no doubt the most horrendous of all forms of sexual violence and is one of the most heinous crimes that can be committed against a person. Rape causes immeasurable anguish to the victim and his/her family. Simply put, rape ruins the life of the victim and that of his or her family.

It becomes exceptionally appalling when committed by a person with public or moral authority, with willful use of one’s office or authority, resources and facilities, or when committed with the knowledge or even help of the head of a public office or institution to which the perpetrator belongs.

While RA 8353 which reclassified rape from a crime against chastity to that of a crime against persons also did away with the case law requirement of tenacious resistance, courts still have differing interpretations as to resistance. Moreover, the apparent failure of the law in defining consent from the perspective of the victim had paved the way for some judges to rule that the victims had consented to the sexual intrusion when they were not able to put up any amount of resistance. There is thus a need for the law to zero-in on the absence of consent as the central element in the crime of rape.

What for many may be the most intimate expression of love or of oneness, when done without the consent or against the will of one party, is transformed into that heinous crime called rape. It is the lack of or inability to give consent that violates the victim’s body and dignity. It is the lack of or inability to give consent that leaves a lasting mark in the victim’s psyche and whole-being.

In the views on the Karen Tayag Vertido vs. Philippines (Communication No. 18/2008) adopted by the CEDAW Committee on July 16, 2010 the CEDAW Committee recommended that the Philippine definition in the anti-rape law should center on the lack of consent as the core of the definition of rape. It is the lack of or inability to give consent that is the very essence of the crime of rape.

In the hope of addressing the inadequacies in the law, this bill highlights the essence of the crime of rape which is lack of consent in the following manner, to wit:

1 The following data on Rape cases have been gathered by Center for Women’s Resources Philippines (CWR):
   - The number of reported cases of rape increased from 5,132 in 2010 to 9,875 in 2014 (92% increase). This means that 1 woman or child was raped every 53 minutes.
   - Only 3 out of 10 women who experienced physical or sexual violence sought help to put an end to the same.
   - Based on CWR’s record, the youngest victim of rape is 3 years old while the oldest is 86 years old. [CWR, 2012]
   - 8 out of 10 cases of sexual abuse were committed by the victim’s husband or partner.
   - From June 2010 to November 2015, there were 10 reported cases of military rape where the usual victim were children and indigenous women. [Karapatan, 2016].
   - Out of several thousands of rape cases, only 7,416 accused were in jail as of December 2012. A fewer number of these cases reached conviction.
1) It provides for specific and clearer instances of a form of rape called sexual violation which is premised on lack of consent;
2) It provides for instances when lack of consent is presumed; and
3) It addresses the special situation of those who, by reason of their mental or physical state, are unable to give consent.

Particularly, in providing for instances when lack of consent is presumed, the onus to prove consent is placed on the accused and not on the victim. Lack of consent is presumed in six (6) instances as follows:
1) When the act is attended by force, threat, or intimidation;
2) When there is fraudulent machination, grave abuse of authority or moral ascendancy;
3) When the victim is deprived of reason or is otherwise unconscious. — This hopes to address the reality that not all forms of resistance or non-consent is expressed in the form of physical resistance. This also reinforces the reality that rape does not only occur among or between strangers and that, in fact, peer rape or rape perpetrated by a person known to the victim can be more traumatic for the victim. Non-consensual sexual act committed through fraudulent machination, grave abuse of authority or moral ascendancy is as deplorable as a non-consented sexual act that was perpetrated with the use of force or physical violence.
4) When the victim is incapable of giving consent due to his or her mental or physical state or capacity;
5) When the victim is below fifteen years (15) of age or if fifteen (15) years of age and above, but he or she has a mental capacity of that of a fifteen (15) year old or below and the offender is of legal age.
6) When the offender is a biological or adoptive parent or a de facto parent or a person who has raised the offended parent without the benefit of legal adoption, ascendant, step-parent, de facto or legal guardian, relative by consanguinity or affinity within the third civil degree, or the common-law spouse or live-in partner of the parent of the victim. — This does away with the requisite of proving a legal relationship between parties in cases of rape by related parties as in the case of a rape committed by a parent against his/her child by the specific inclusion of a de facto parent or a common-law spouse or live-in partner of the parent of the victim.

To be consistent with the proposed definition of consent, Article 266-D which provides that "any physical overt act manifesting resistance or that the victim is so situated that he/she is incapable of giving consent may be accepted as evidence in the prosecution of the crime" is proposed to be repealed.

Aside from clarifying the definition of consent, the bill also seeks to recognize that other forms of unwanted sexual conduct against males, young boys in particular, be recognized as rape. It is not unknown that rape as a hate crime may be perpetuated against members of the LGBT (lesbians, gays, bisexuals, transgenders) community.

The bill also includes in the list of aggravating circumstances the act of recording and public dissemination of the rape. Recently, a university student in Las Piñas was drugged and raped by a group of young men; the commission of the crime was uploaded by the perpetrators in the internet for the public to see, increasing the humiliation and victimization of the offended party.

To further highlight the seriousness of the crime of rape and to address the power relations that currently exist in marriage, this bill also seeks to repeal of Article 266-C which pardons the rapist if he subsequently marries the victim or the rapist-husband if pardoned by the wife;

Notwithstanding the stigma of being victims, being violated and all, some women brave their experience and fight their battle. However, not everyone fought up to the end. Most succumbed to fear and trauma for recounting each and every single act done against their will and against their person. They retreat for being raped once more in the public during trials. Tribulations are created in different forms; most are sugar-coated and deceiving. Only braver women kept their heads up but not all rape victims end up victors.

While all rape victims may not be as brave as Karen Vertido, women and other victims of rape who would want to seek justice through the judicial system must be given ample remedies under the law.

The immediate passage and affectivity of the proposed bill are requested.
