SEVENTEENTH CONGRESS

First Regular Session

House Bill No. 633

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Cable television ("TV") and telecommunications companies mainly employ cables and related transmission equipment to deliver their services to their customers. These companies thus make attachments to utility poles and make use of related support structures and rights of way to transmit cable television or telecommunications signals, as the case may be.

Because the establishment and maintenance of utility poles and related support structures and the acquisition of rights of way require significant financial investments, only a few can afford to do so. Hence, cable TV and telecommunications companies make use of pole attachments and pay fees to pole owners for such attachments. This arrangement, however, has allegedly led to pole owners charging excessive amounts for cable TV and telecommunications pole attachments. The huge cost of making and maintaining pole attachments are then passed on to consumers.

Congress must thus step in and regulate the use of utility poles, related support structures, and rights of way and the rates, terms, and conditions for making pole attachments in order to promote the growth and expansion of the Philippine cable TV and telecommunications industries and to enable the public to enjoy a more affordable and a wider array of cable TV and telecommunication services. Indeed, our Constitution provides for the state policy recognizing the vital role of communication and information in nation-building.

In view of all the foregoing, the kind and favorable support of the Members of Congress for the prompt and timely passage of this measure is earnestly sought.
