AN ACT
CREATING THE NATIONAL REVENUE AUTHORITY, PROVIDING FUNDS
THEREFOR

EXPLANATORY NOTE

A persistent deficit creates doubt within the financial markets on government's ability to repay its debt, thus, pushing the cost of borrowing even higher. The markings of a financial crisis increasingly threaten the entire economy until a point is reached when business confidence is lost and creditors refuse to lend any further.

Thus, it is very important to dramatically reduce the National Government's deficit. One way is to cut on public expenditures. However, this runs counter to the need for more public investments particularly on health, education and infrastructure to combat poverty and encourage economic development. To reduce the deficit without compromising the development spending, government needs to significantly improve tax collection particularly the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) which accounts for about 80% of total tax collection.

Past efforts to reorganize the BIR have proven to be short-lived because they were authorized by mere administrative fiat. At present, the BIR is hampered by at least three fundamental institutional constraints: (a) rigid personnel management system where promotion is based merely on loyalty and seniority rather than exemplary performance (e.g. exceeding the revenue target); (b) compensation structure that restricts the hiring of first-rate professionals; and (c) strict line-item budgeting that limits the flexibility in the allocation of funds.

There is an urgent for Congress to create a Revenue Authority to address the growing taxpayer dissatisfaction particularly over front-line services, high level of tax evasion/avoidance, and increasing perception of systematic corruption in the Bureau. It is expected that the new authority shall be free from political interference in terms of decisions pertaining to revenue rulings, audit and assessment personnel management, and budgeting.

The proposed bill shall have the following salient features:

1. The Authority shall be governed by a Revenue Board composed of four representatives from the government and three from the private sector. The government representatives shall include the heads of the Department of Finance (as Chairperson), the Department of Budget and Management, the National Economic Development Authority and the Securities and Exchange Commission. Private sector representatives shall be nominated by peak professional organizations, and appointed by the President of the Philippines. They must be recognized experts in the fields of economics, accounting, law, business management and other allied professions. The members of the Board shall serve for a fixed tenure of office with different periods of expiry to avoid disruption of services, to prevent abandonment of approved plans/programs and to limit reversal of revenue rulings and regulations.

2. The Revenue Authority shall be headed by a Chief Executive Officer (CEO) responsible for the preparation of the following: work program, organizational structure, annual budget, compensation package, and appointment of rank and file employees, among many others. The CEO shall be appointed by the Revenue Board for a period of three years with possible reappointment under a performance-based contract.
3. The Authority shall receive an annual service fee of not less than 1% but not more than 2% of total collection of the immediate preceding year, net of local government shares.
4. Selection of personnel for the new Revenue Authority shall be strictly based on merit and fitness. An attractive separation/retirement package shall be offered to those who opt to not join the Authority.

In this light, the creation of an independent Revenue Authority should be pursued.
