HOUSE BILL NO. 7209

EXEMPLARY NOTE

Recently, the threat of eruption by the Taal Volcano has forced thousands of Filipinos living within the vicinity to fled their homes. Unfortunately, these Filipinos also left behind animals, including pets, livestock and working animals. Hundreds of these animals were stranded in the vicinity with nothing to eat or drink, covered with ash spewed by the volcano, and were still leashed.

While there were groups and organizations which stepped up to provide food and eventually rescue these animals, the impending threat of a possible volcanic eruption forced the local government units of the affected areas to halt all operations due to the risk it poses to the volunteers who will be in the area when forced evacuation of all residents already took place.

From this issue comes the importance of introducing necessary adjustments to our policy approaches, especially in the lack of guidelines with regard to the rescue of livestock and working animals during times of calamity. Many of our fellow Filipinos depend on these animals for their business, and the rescue of the same will hopefully reduce all possible impact a calamity will cause to the economic status of these people.

Hence, it is important that the proper government agencies be mandated to provide policy guidelines during situations herein mentioned. Through this legislation, we envision that we will be able to aid our fellow Filipinos during times of calamity, and exercise our humanity in caring for animals as well. It is for these reasons that the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
