EXPLANATORY NOTE

Due to economic loss, it is inevitable for some companies to downsize or shut down its operations. This results to layoffs of employees. To address this problem, Republic Act No. 11199 or the Social Security Act of 2018, was enacted to ensure the social protection of employees, including those who have lost their job due to economic fallout.

Among the landmark provisions of the Social Security Act of 2018 is the unemployment insurance or involuntary separation benefit. As stated in the law, the Social Security System (SSS) shall grant cash benefits to affected members equivalent to fifty percent (50%) of their average monthly salary credit for a maximum of two (2) months. This unemployment insurance is beneficial as workers are given economic support while looking for new job opportunities.

However, the law provides that only members who have paid at least thirty-six (36) monthly contributions are entitled to the unemployment insurance. Members who are not eligible to this requirement are left disadvantaged, making them vulnerable to financial problems in times of economic crisis and public health emergencies.
This bill seeks to expand the coverage for unemployment and involuntary separation benefits of the Social Security System Act of 2018. It intends to fill the gap in the social protection of workers who have lost their job by including unemployment benefits for members who have paid contributions for at least one year. The urgent passage of this bill is timely as many Filipinos have lost their jobs and are left without livelihood due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
