HOUSE BILL NO. 2378

Introduced by Representative Florida P. Robes

EXPLANATORY NOTE

According to the Philippine Institute for Development Studies, poverty incidence in the country can be addressed in two ways: (1) improving educational service to increase the productive potential of marginalized sectors, and (2) providing employment and income opportunities for the poor to afford quality education in order to compete in the labor markets.

The City of San Jose Del Monte, Province of Bulacan houses at least forty (40) relocation projects constructed by the national government through the National Housing Authority, as well as more than 150 residential subdivisions. However, most of the beneficiaries of the housing project are forced to sell up their properties because there are no employment and income opportunities available to them. As such, they revert back to squatting or worse, sell their houses at a lower price. And the problem continues.

The intent of this legislative proposal is premised on the second way, which is to provide employment and income opportunities by tapping human capabilities. As reported out the Philippines ranks 46th with a score of 71.24 in terms of human capital endowment. Unfortunately, development of human capital locally has been neglected. The skills and capabilities of our people are not put into productive use within our country. Most of our skilled workers prefer to work abroad because of lack of employment opportunities here.

If this proposal is approved, it will entice investments on human resource. Companies will consider establishing their businesses in the district. As a human resource capital, the City will also become a haven to training institutes that will enhance the capabilities of the residents of the City as well from neighbouring towns. As such, its approval is deemed a response to the call to alleviate poverty by tapping human resource as a means to improve the economy.
