HOUSE BILL No. 3288

EXPLANATORY NOTE

This bill is essentially about remembrance and celebration – the remembrance of a dark era that brought shame and infamy to the nation, and the celebration of the courage and conviction of those who refused to submit to tyranny and paid the ultimate sacrifice so that we may live in relative freedom today.

The declaration of martial law on September 21, 1972 by former President Ferdinand Marcos ushered in a period unparalleled in post-war Philippine history. The suppression of democratic rights and civil liberties, the unbroken pattern of gross human rights violations and the systematic plunder of the nation's treasury were its terrible legacy, the effects of which our nation still has to recover from until today.

Compared to the other military dictatorships of the 1970s and 1980s, the Marcos regime was exceptional by any standard for both the quantity and quality of its violence. While the Marcos' regime's tally of 3,257 extrajudicial killings may be far lower than Argentina's 8,000 missing, this exceeds the 2,115 extrajudicial deaths under General Augusto Pinochet in Chile and the 266 dead under the Brazilian junta.

Under the authoritarian rule of Marcos, human rights violations were the apex of a pyramid of terror – 3,257 killed, 35,000 tortured and 70,000 incarcerated. In striking contrast to Argentina, only 737 Filipinos "disappeared" between 1975 and 1985. However, nearly four times that number – 2,250 – or 77 percent of all victims were salvaged. Many were tortured, mutilated and dumped on a roadside for public display to create widespread fear.

In establishing a national day of remembrance and celebration, this bill hopes to impart the lessons of martial law so the present generations and those yet to come shall never forget what should never be repeated. The underlying objective is to teach the youth about the difference between dictatorship and democracy, between oppression and freedom, between right and wrong.

This bill further seeks to underscore the continuing struggle for justice of the victims of human rights violations during the Marcos era. Its authors hope that by taking the necessary steps toward redressing these gross violations, the long-overdue process for remembering, for recording and for atoning can be established so that the nation can come to terms with the past.

In view of the foregoing, immediate approval of this measure is earnestly sought.
