EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 1941

Introduced by REPRESENTATIVES ENRICO A. PINEDA and MICHAEL ODYLON L. ROMERO, PhD.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

We have always believed that education is the foundation upon which one builds a future. Realizing this, the government has endeavoured on ways to provide its youth with every opportunity to access free primary, secondary, and even tertiary education, so as to assure that the young will have greater chance to become professionals themselves.

However, it should be realized that finishing school is not the be-all-end-all to a promising career in an employment environment where title equates to proficiency. It bears stressing that a college diploma does not confer one title but rather, it is after hurdling a professional examination may an individual claim to be a medical doctor, nurse, engineer, teacher or lawyer, among others. And this professional examinations come at a steep price particularly for those indigent students who may not afford the cost of a review, much less the fee required to undertake professional examination.

For an indigent graduate who had pinned all hopes for a brighter future in this journey to a professional career, the government as the administrator of these professional examinations should not make this exercise of regulation a hindrance. For someone who may consider these examination fees restrictive, it should be afforded for free and with no dime for cost. In that manner, we can better assure that those who deserve and are qualified may proceed unhampered in their pursuit of a means that may eventually help them eke out of poverty.

Early passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
